In addition, a number of worthwhile books will be reviewed and the Journal will contain the best of the submissions to the 1963 Essay Contest.

As is readily apparent, this year's issue will be most interesting and educational, continuing the Journal's policy of disseminating pertinent and knowledgeable opinion on military topics—a policy which has earned for the Journal the respect of both contributors and readers alike, and gained for it a reputation as one of the leading North American publications of unfettered ideas and thought.

While an Air Force publication, the Journal is equally intended for, and will be of interest to, all civilian employees as well as military—in fact its circulation is as wide as all Canadians interested in enlightened comment on contemporary topics of our times. It will, of course, continue to be an invaluable reference source for those personnel engaged in qualifying exam studies, the GAP programme and various aspects of Service courses at all levels.

The price remains at $1.00 per copy payable through mess accounts, by individual invoice with cheques (including exchange) payable to the Air Force College Journal, or by pre-payment. To obtain your copy simply give your number, rank, name and mailing address, along with type of payment preferred, to your section or unit head, or register this information

Report On Red Cross Clinic

By F/L FRED TUERK Station Co-ordinator

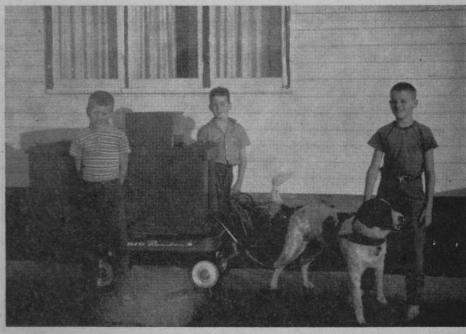

The regular semi-annual Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic was held in the Combined Mess on August 7 and 8. The clinic was staffed by members of the Canadian Red Cross Society's Blood Transfusion Service. They were assisted by women of the Catholic Women's League and the Protestant Ladies Guild. The Officers' Wives Club members, under Mrs. Anne Campbell, canvassed the PMQ's and Rental Units and maintained a nursery at the clinic.

The turnout of dependent donors was slightly larger than at the last clinic, but the response from the station as a whole was a different story. There was a drop of 25% in the number of donors. We thank the 390 people who donated blood but we are disappointed that more donors did not show up. The hot weather is no excuse. After all, this is a free service to the public and the only way that it can be kept that way is by the donation of blood at such clinics as the one held at Station Winnipeg.

Let us hope that at the next clinic, which will be held in January 1964, Station Winnipeg will redeem itself.

Smokey's Stage Line

Here are three boys from the Rental Unit area who have gone into business for themselves. They are L to R: Robert McCormack, Barry Crawford and Timmy Sullivan. Smokey was unimpressed with the fact that his picture was to appear in the paper and it took a great deal of coaxing and lifting on the part of his owner, Timmy, to keep him upright on all four feet long enough to take this photo.

EDITORIAL CORNER

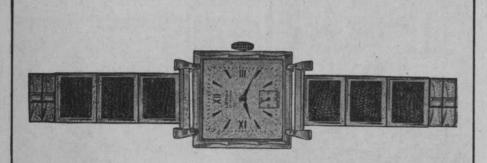

What has happened to our little girls? They were such darlings. Bundled in mother's old dresses, and slumping merrily around in outdated and outsized high heels discarded by the next-door-neighbor, they gladdened the hearts of all they encountered. Proudly pushing doll carriages, they cared for the rag-and-buttons dolls inside with a mother's love. They played mother, father, sister, brother, aunt, uncle, butcher, baker, nurse, in a kaleidoscope of action. They read fairy tales, and stirred mud pies with a stick. They coloured with crayons, and baked in an apple-box oven. They laughed and cried. They were naive and unaffected.

It is tragic that they have disappeared, those delightful carriagepushing, doll-loving, fairy tale reading, mud pie making little girls.

In their place, we welcome a new girl. Dressed to the hilt, complete with makeup, high heels, and stealthily-padded clothing, she is difficult to distinguish from her five and ten years older seniors. She has a womanly air, and as often as not a boyfriend. She dances and plays the transistor radio. Her ten-dollar doll lies unused on the dresser. Replacing the fairy tale is the "true story" and the fashion magazine. No longer content to remain at home and do things our little girl was happy at, she is found on the street corner or in the snack bar, huddled in an uncomfortable, frightening, alien world with others like her. She talks in nervous outbursts about boyfriends, movie stars, and pop records. She laughs very little, and when she does, it is with a limp, reserved smile. She is very sophisticated.

Is she happy? As she gazes longingly at her doll, unused on the shelf, is she really excited at the prospect of a date with a "steady"? As she stands in the tight huddle on the street corner, does she really feel that she belongs there? As she dances at a party to the wee small hours, has she forgotten her playhouse and her fairy tales?

What has happened to our little girls? For our part, we miss them. Please help us bring back these delightful, unsophisticated, carriagepushing, doll-loving, fairy tale reading, mudpie-making little girls.

SKELETON IN THE CLOSET

The ten-year-old son of a physician was playing in his father's office with another boy of the same age. Suddenly the first lad threw open a closet door and disclosed to the terrified gaze of his little friend an articulated skeleton.

When the visitor had sufficiently recovered from his shock to stand the announcement, the doctor's son explained that his father was extremely proud of the skeleton.

"Is he?" asked the other. "Why?"

"but I think it was his first pa-

The honorary president of the Western Numismatic Association was very pleased to report that their recent coin display show for '63 was a very satisfactory success. Gerry Boux thanked all who assisted him one way or another and said these shows will definitely become annual events.

Several Winnipeg and out-of-town dealers had their vending bourse tables nicely arranged to accommodate the flow of guests and purchasers from various parts of Canada and the U.S. From what I saw of the Coinerama during the last day, the spacious Colonial Room of the Royal Alexandra Hotel was buzzing with activity between the purchasers of coins and the vendors.

Some of the coins on display which caught my eye were not for sale, dated as far back as the years 1497 and 1555 from England. There were at least 20 similar very old coins of this type most interesting to see due to their extreme rarity and beyond the reach of most col-

Among the Canadian coins sold I noticed that quite a few people had purchased the almost rare 1942 beaver Tombac 5-cents pieces at 75c each and this is a bargain price today. Personally, they ought to hold these coin shows at least twice each year because coin col-lectors can really pick up some very good buys. The best time of the year would be April and October when most people are not away on their vacation.

So long for now, we'll chat with you all again on Friday, the 13th of September as this boy will be leaving soon on his annual leave.

The stage was set when Ed Schalme came to bat in the bottom of the first extra inning of the last game. This game would decide who would advance to the Division

The game had been tied at the end of six. The opposition, Federated Co-op, scored one in the top of the seventh. This was matched by a homer by Bill Springstead in our half.

In the top of the first extra inning, our adversaries again went ahead by one. In our half, after working his way to a full count, Red Houghton walked, then came home to tie the score on a drive by Tony Woitte.

When Schalme came to bat, Woitte was on second and a hush was in the air. Losing pitcher, Charlie Hart, with a one-one count, served a waist-high fast ball. Schalme smashed a line drive into centre field and we were in the Division finals.

Here's a true story, and it's an elephant joke.

An elephant walked into a bar in Angola one hot day and ordered a Gin Fizz. The bartender brought the drink and was handed a ten dollar bill. Instead of returning the right change, the bartender brought back only fifty cents, feeling that he could easily dupe the elephant, but felt he should keep an eye on him. A little while later, the elephant noticed the bartender watching him and called him over.

"Listen here! What's the idea of staring at me like that?" demanded the elephant.

"I'm sorry, sir," replied the bartender, "but we don't get many elephants in here."

"Well," exploded the elephant, "at $9.50 a drink it's no wonder."

Drive safely.

During June, two years ago, an aircraft flying between Fort Churchill and Coral Harbour on the way to England via the polar route, was reported missing. The single-engined Mooney, with one pilot and a dog aboard, became lost and began experiencing engine trouble. After a few frantic calls to Coral Harbour asking for a course to steer (Coral Harbour has no fixing aids), the aircraft was set down on the tundra. Before landing, the pilot was able to radio a description of his landing area.

111 KU despatched a Dakota, the only one available as there was another search in progress in the NWT, and all other aircraft in the area were asked to keep an eye open. A USAF C-54 found the downed aircraft when a call on VHF was heard. The missing pilot, or maybe the dog, heard the C-54 overhead, and transmitted to identify himself. The USAF aircraft homed in on the radio and located the site where it was discovered that the Mooney required technical assistance and fuel. The occupants were uninjured.

The 111 KU Dakota landed with fuel, and two crewmen were ready to make minor adjustments to the aircraft's carburettors. However, the downed pilot would not allow the mechanics to check the aircraft at takeoff power and they were unable to determine the cause of engine failure at low RPM.

The pilot was offered evacuation to Coral but decided to fly his own aircraft and took off. Two hundred feet and thirty seconds later the engine quite and the aircraft force landed. This time the propeller and nose wheel were bent, and the pilot had no choice but to accompany the RCAF to Coral Harbour.

When it was all over, a crewman was heard to remark, "It sure was an unfortunate accident. That poor dog!"

Canadian "Jenny" On Exhibition At Uplands

Thoroughly reconditioned, gleaming and polished, the Canadian JN4, acquired by the National Aviation Museum early last year, officially went on display on Wednesday, July 24th at 8:30 pm nesday, July 24th at 8:30 p.m.

National Aesources Minister Arthur Laing acted as chairman at a brief ceremony to open the exhibit in the rotunda of the Ottawa Air Terminal Building at Uplands. Franklin I. Young, former bush pilot and winner of the McKee Trophy in 1953, spoke of the history of the JN4, and recalled some of his own experiences with it.

K. M. Molson, Curator of the National Aviation Museum, described what had to be done to restore the aircraft for display.

The public was invited to attend the opening.

The trim biplane, in fresh aircraft cotton and clear varnish, looks as new as it did in 1918, when it rolled out of Canadian Aeroplanes Limited in Toronto. The aircraft has been dismantled and reconditioned. The original parts have been restored wherever possible or replaced when necessary, by pieces that are historically correct. One side of the fuselage has been left uncovered to show the construction of the plane.

"We believe that we now have the most nearly correct specimen of the Canadian JN4 aircraft in existence," says K. M. Molson, Curator of the National Aviation Museum. "We still need to locate the original instruments. Only two authentic instruments are installed at present; the others are replicas made at the Museum."

The Canadian "Jenny" or "Canuck" is considered the most important aircraft in the history of Canadian aviation. She was the first aircraft to be produced in quantity in this country. During the war years of 1917 and 1918, over 1,200 completed aircraft came out of the Toronto plant. The planes were used for military training, and after the war they were sold to civil operators.

The Museum's "Canuck" was

The Museum's "Canuck" was found on the farm of Edward Faulkener of Honeye Falls, near Rochester, New York. Mr. Faulkener bought the aircraft in the 1920's and flew it privately for some time. The biplane had been stored away for some thirty years when arrangements to purchase it were made by the National Aviation Museum.

The "Canuck" was the plane of the barn-stormers and the stunt men of the early 1920's. She established the aircraft manufacturing industry in Canada; flew the first Canadian air mail run from Montreal to Toronto in 1918; made the first flight over the Canadian Rockies in 1919; and carried engineers on the first Canadian aerial

A SIDEKICK

The businessman who did more boasting than selling had joined a group of friends at lunch. Interrupting the table conversation he said exultantly, "Guess how much money I made this year?"

A long-time acquaintance answered drily, "Half!"

Benevolent Fund Has Record Year

The RCAF Benevolent Fund has concluded a record year for grants and loans. The annual report was presented by W/C D. P. Jamieson, MBE, chairman of the board, at the 20th annual meeting recently.

The RCAF Benevolet Fund was established in order to assist serving and former members of the RCAF and their dependents in time of financial distress. Since the end of World War II assistance extended by the fund has increased steadily. As well as making loans to those in financial difficulties, educational assistance to university and vocational students also increased during 1962.

At the close of 1962 the Fund totalled $8,711,527 and the generous contributions of the active service units have helped maintain this healthy financial position. During the year, the Fund extended grants and loans to the sum of $446,000 to service and ex-service applicants. Of the total of 1,144 applicants for help received during the year, only 55 were rejected.

The new president of the Fund is W/C H. E. Langford, who succeeds A/V/M F. S. McGill, CB. Air Vice Marshal McGill replaces W/C Jamieson as chairman of the board. Air Marshal C. R. Dunlap, CBS, succeeds A/M Hugh Campbell, CBE, as honorary president. Mr. H. G. Norman, CMG, remains honorary life president. Air Commodore D. E. MacKell, CBE, who retired as manager of the Benevolent Fund early this year, was replaced by Mr. J. C. Carrothers.
